for the ASBYU primary start today at 8:30 a.m. All may vote by presenting their slivity cards at one of the 10 stations located around campus. A located in the lobby of the ence Center, outside the Harold brary, in the Wilkinson Center andy shop, Morris and Cannon the Jesse Knight lobby, the iving Cor lounge and the PE Building. All polls will be 8:30 a.m. till 5 p.m., except 3 Building booth which will be 9 p.m. on Thursday. ing of these booths will get a wider cross-section of the student body to vote, according to George Ryskamp, elections committee chairman. "PE students who don't usually get up on campus or science students who don't often get to the Wilkinson Center will have a greater opportunity to vote," he explained. "We expect a turn out of about 30 per cent or 7,000 students, which is comparable to a city election turn out," he said.

Intercollegiate Knights will be in charge of all of the balloting and will man half of the booths. Various campus clubs will assist them.

Voting for the presidential teams will be done on paper ballots because there are 12 candidates and only 10 places for names on the voting machines, according to Ryskamp. Voting for the other offices will be by voting machine. Presidential vote will be counted on Friday night by the elections committee and all of the primary results will be announced at 9 p.m. Friday in room 321 ELWC, Ryskamp said. The results will also be broadcast on KEVY and KOVO radio between 9 and 10 p.m. Friday.

Of the 12 candidates running for president, any of them could take the election, as far as I can see," Ryskamp noted. "Most of the candidates are very optimistic about their chances, which is unwarranted because it is a very close race. It is the same for most other offices, including the women's office," he said. There have been no major violations of the elections rules, according to the elections committee. "The beauty of the system is the candidates enforce each other's conduct," Ryskamp commented. "I have had four or five midnight phone calls by candidates who didn't think their opponents were staying within the rules."

Candidates were given the go-ahead to start their quad projects at 12 a.m. this morning. "Students can expect to see towers, windmills - just about anything within the rules," Ryskamp noted. "These projects will catch a lot of people and could affect the voting if a candidate really uses some originality." The quad projects have been brought back because they give the students a chance to see the candidates together at one time and talk to them, according to Ryskamp.

"It will definitely benefit the students to read the candidates' platforms," Ryskamp said. "Students will find some of the platforms are ridiculous," he noted. Pictures and platforms of the candidates from the Daily Universe will be placed on tables by all of the polls, along with campaign literature from each candidate. Pictures of the candidates are also on page 12 of today's Universe.

After the students have voted, they will receive a pin that says "I voted. Have You?" This will increase the number of voters, we hope, and the hoards of candidates should leave you alone if you have on one of these pins," Ryskamp explained.

All candidates attended a meeting Tuesday night, during which they were briefed on election rules and drew names for positions on the ballot. There will be no campaigning allowed within 50 feet of the voting booth, Ryskamp said, and all candidates must turn in a listing of all of their campaign expenditures by Friday.

Next Tuesday, students will be able to question the finalists in a meeting from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Varsity Theater. The final voting will then take place next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The elections committee has chosen Doctrine and Covenants 98:10 as their motto for this year's election. It says, "Wherefore, honest men should be sought for diligently and good men and wise men ye should observe to uphold."

"Presently there isn't enough time in executive council meetings to ever get to the executive. All the meeting time is taken up with the legislative process," he said. He also said that with the present program the vice presidents have a tendency to be more lenient with fellow vice presidents in allocating funds.

Reynolds said in the new program there would be a line of authority. He said the assembly would be a check on the programs and that they would be responsible for allocating the funds.

He said approximately $200,000 would be allocated at the beginning of the year and $50,000 would be left for new programs that could be initiated during the year.

He said underneath the president there would be executive assistants to carry out the programs similar to the union boards instituted by other universities. These people would be appointed by the president with the approval of the assembly.

An objection was raised by one of the candidates that the executive assistants "would have no security in their job and they would have to answer to the president."

Reynolds said there would be a stipend for these people and said there would not be much of a turnover because of this. He also pointed out the success there has been in the status quo with such appointed officers as the Ombudsman.

Rick Wilson, executive vice president, also pointed out if a member was ousted unfairly there is the check of the courts.

Cooperation pledged

He said he would answer written questions and meet with top committee members in the impeachment inquiry. But the President said to deliver all information any member of the panel might seek would not speed the inquiry, but instead would lead to a long delay while the panel to "plow through it in a fishing expedition."

Several candidates felt the statement by ASBYU Athletics Vice President Dave Waterman and Randy Smith, administrative assistant to ASBYU Pres. Mark Reynolds, supported the platform of a particular candidate for office and should have been paid for by student body funds.

According to Bob Bush, "The reason I'm making the ticket policy an issue is because it is an issue."

While Nixon supported the Haldeman account of a March 21 White House conversation, he acknowledged that other individuals reading a transcript or hearing a tape recording might reach different conclusions.

Nonetheless, he said he knows what he meant and knows what he did about payoffs or clemency for the defendants. He said he never at any time authorized either step.

At his second news conference in nine days, the President also:

Prov woman shot, wounded

A switchboard operator at the Utah State Division of Family Services office in Provo was shot and wounded Tuesday about noon.

According to Sven Nielsen, Provo City chief of police, a woman walked into the office and emptied a small pistol at Thelma Hickey, 920 S. 340 West, Provo.

Nielsen said Rose Marie Dute, R.F.D. 1, Spanish Fork, was arrested and charged in city court with aggravated assault.

The present system is "the most workable and fairest ever," according to Jim Pedersen. Past experience has shown that many former ticket policies have not been fair to all, he said.

Larry Arnett was unavailable for comment.

Officials at BYU and the Provo City Police issued warnings today against any efforts by students to form vigilante groups in an attempt to apprehend the so-called "criminals."

Pres. Dallin H. Oaks and Provo Chief of Police Sven C. Nielsen encouraged students to be cooperative with police officers and others involved in attempts to apprehend the criminal who has attacked at least four coed students in off-campus apartments during the past nine months.

"Students should not arm themselves since this could lead to possible legal problems. Or tragic mistakes or accidents," cautioned Chief Nielsen. "We may be able to use force help otherwise, but attempting to take the law into their own hands is unwise and may be misunderstood."

The use of firearms to apprehend a suspect requires a great deal of skill and training so as to not offend the law by the action.

Pres. Oaks encouraged coeds to follow the suggestions made by Chief Nielsen in a recent public statement on how they can cooperate in apprehending the criminal. "Keeping doors locked would be one of the best things to discourage intruders," Pres. Oaks said.

In his Wednesday's news conference, President Nixon pledged cooperation with those investigating Watergate.

Constitutional vote delayed by executives

By TAMARA SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

In a 6-2 vote the Executive Council voted Wednesday night in favor of a motion to postpone the election on the proposed constitution until 10 school days after the petition has received the required 1,250 signatures or approval by eight council members.

Voting in favor of the motion made by Matthew Mack, ombudsman, were Dave Waterman, athletics vice president, Jon Elton, culture vice president, Michael Waddoups, finance vice president, Ron Richards, freshman vice president, Steve Nordstrom, organizations vice president, and Karla Knudsen, women's vice president.

Mark Reynolds, ASBYU president was also absent due to sickness. Wilson sat in his place and conducted the meeting.

Council members backing postponement of the election said they felt the students had not had enough time or publicity to be properly informed of the issue.

However, forcing a special election for the constitutional revision will most likely result in a lower voter turnout with less chance of the constitution getting the required votes to pass.

For the constitution to be adopted 10 per cent of the student body must vote with two thirds voting in favor of the constitutional proposal.

Some council members said before the meeting they would bring the issue up late in the session so there would be enough votes in favor of the motion to defeat a presidential veto.

The motion to postpone the constitutional election was passed at 6:55 p.m., five minutes before the council's scheduled adjournment time.

Supporters of the motion argued that students have not been given enough time or enough information about the proposed constitution to be properly informed.

Elton said, "Many people don't know what it means. Give people time to get to know what it says and campaign for or against it."

Some council members said they still feel it is not a legal proposal. Said Elton, "Until it has the signatures it is not a proposal."

Wilson answered that that is a matter of court interpretation. S. Derrin Watson, attorney general, said that the Supreme Court should make the final decision as to whether the election date could be changed by the council.

Matthew Mack, ombudsman, said that there had been so much talk about change in the paper that the students would be expecting a change and made the motion.

Mac Haddow, one of the authors of the new constitution said, "The council has the feeling that the students are ready to buy anything that has a change." He said that he had faith in the integrity of the students to decide, investigate and look at the issue. He said the students are intelligent enough and could be informed.

Nordstrom said, "I don't feel anyone's been educated to the degree they need to be."

The council also discussed budget proposals for Polynesian Assembly, Chess Club, and KBYU-FM all of which will be voted upon next week.

Chief Nielsen was appointed to be a student representative on the freshman orientation steering committee.

The council voted against giving culture office $500 to buy art for the Wilkinson center.

"Orem Housing tion" was formed night in an effort to tenants to combat serious housing "according to Jay i, a senior public major.

ASBYU ombudsman s announced plans y for the formation tudent housing tion.

Orem Housing will organize with similar concerns on such problems as t, unfair rents, discrimination, zoning ordinance enforcement, rental agreements to protect both residents and landlords and maintenance of facilities, said Greenan.

"There are many housing problems in Utah County that are not being met by an existing organization," explained Greenan. The Association hopes to work with city and county officials in finding solutions to housing problems, he said.

Working on a one-tenant-one-landlord basis has proved to be ineffective, according to Greenan. "We believe there's strength in numbers," he said.

The Orem group will meet some time in the next two weeks to elect officers, said Greenan.

The County Action Agency (CAA) will act as a facilitator or catalyst in encouraging housing associations countywide, according to Lynn Curtis. "One of our underlying concerns or goals is that, through community action, people can seek a solution to their problems," he said.

The CAA aims to find the needs of each local community and then will work with residents toward organizing and finding solutions to problems, Curtis explained.

The local agencies that are organized can then band together on a county basis to push on issues that are common to them all, added Greenan. "We hope to communicate in an effective way to solve some of the problems," he said.

There will be a meeting March 14 at 7:30 p.m. at the Timpanogos Mental Health Center in Provo to discuss the formation of a coalition of minority and low-income residents, said Greenan. County Commissioner Yukus Inouye will lead the discussion and low-income housing will be one of the topics considered.

The need for smaller interest groups band together as an effective political influence was stressed by Ombudsman Mack.

The first meeting of the BYU Student Tenant Association will be Tuesday, March 12 at 4 p.m. in 321 ELWC, according to Mack. "The purpose of the meeting is to elect officers, write a constitution and submit an application to become a club," he explained.

"We have special problems for students that we will focus on, as well as pushing for county-wide and state-wide legislation," he said.

When asked concerning the necessity of such a student housing association, Mack responded, "The Office of Student Housing has done a good job of having availability listings, getting scarce housing for students, attempting to assure that approved off-campus houses in Utah County," he explained. "Until student interests can be organized, there are no two organizations between which Housing can mediate," he said.

"The area which it cannot logically assist students in is representing students as collective tenants here in Utah County," he explained. "Until student interests can be organized, there are no two organizations between which Housing can mediate," he said.

Mack said, "The office of residential student housing is inherently incapable of representing the student in the landlord/tenant relationship."

LDS planning for World fair

By MICKEY TOLMAN
Universe Staff Writer

The LDS exhibit at Expo '74 in Spokane, Washington is to be centered around the Book of Mormon, according to Church Public Communications officials.

The design of the pavilion at the World's fair will depict the metal plates the Book of Mormon originated from.

As visitors walk into the pavilion that resembles the plates, joined by rings and spread open as a book, they will see a brief motion picture, "Ancient America Speaks," which describes archaeological evidences of great civilizations once flourishing in the Americas, and shows their relationship to the Book of Mormon.

Visitors will then be ushered into a theater where they will see a scene taken from an original painting of Tom Lovell. A mannequin, resembling Mormon speaks of the records of his people that were written on plates of gold. The mannequins have the appearance and voices of real persons. Techniques developed by personnel of the Public Communications Department use the mannequins' faces as a movie screen on which speech and facial movements are projected.

Afterwards visitors are ushered into another theater where spiritual pollution will be discussed.

After this presentation, guests will be sent to a browsing area to view a motion picture, "Meet the Mormons," a film that tells about the LDS Church today. Touring the entire pavilion will take approximately 30 minutes, and about 50 persons will be ushered through the exhibit every 10 minutes.

Construction of the Book of Mormon Pavilion is nearing completion in Spokane at the hub of Expo activities. The pavilion rises just off the main mall on piers resting on the river bottom, 20 feet offshore from the north bank of the channel of the Spokane River. Access will be by a wide ramp.

Installation of the dioramas is scheduled to begin March 11 under the direction of personnel from the displays and exhibit section of the Public Communications Department.

According to Thomas D.

The Mormon exhibit at Expo '74 in Spokane, Washington will be designed to depict the metal plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated. Inside exhibits also relate to the Book of Mormon.

Lasko, manager of displays and exhibits, the pavilion should be near completion the first of April.

"That will give the missionaries, who will be guides, a feel for it," he said. He also noted that the equipment is "pretty sophisticated" and they need the time to get the "bugs out." Expo '74, the fourth world exposition in recent years at which the LDS Church has had a pavilion, is scheduled to open May 4 and close Nov. 3.

After viewing the LDS exhibit, speaking particularly about the new technique used on the talking mannequins with facial expressions, King F. Cole, president of Expo '74 stated the mannequins are a breakthrough in exhibition techniques.

BYU students helped to design and make the costumes used on the mannequins in the exhibit.

Dayan, Meir remain chiefs

JERUSALEM (AP) — Premier Golda Meir and Defense Minister Moshe Dayan reversed decisions to quit Israel's new government Wednesday amid reports of a Syrian buildup on the Golan front.

But no crisis, tension or military buildup was visible on the Golan Heights, where Israeli and Syrian tanks battled during the October war, Israel's state radio reported. Dayan, however, was quoted as saying he agreed to remain Israel's defense boss because of a "new security situation" to help overcome the crisis.

Wilson seeks to pay miners

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson's new Labor government sought on Wednesday to satisfy pay claims of 280,000 coal miners whose slowdown and strike brought Britain near industrial breakdown.

A settlement, officially forecast within a day, would get pits operating by the weekend. The resmed flow of coal that fires 70 per cent of the country's power will permit cancellation of the three-day work week prevailing for many British firms and factories.

Final decision expected soon on flood protection resolution

By BECKY STALLINGS
Universe Staff Writer

A decision is expected within the week by Provo City Commissioners on the signing of a joint resolution with Utah County and the U.S. Forest Service on the maintenance and development of flood protection in the Rock Canyon area.

Commissioners had deferred any action on the joint resolution until a more thorough investigation could be made, explained Commissioner M. Wayne Hillier.

He indicated further delay has been due to the week-long absence of Mayor Russell D. Grange.

Mayor Grange has opposed the joint resolution on the advice of City Attorney Glen Ellis, who believes the resolution would make the city liable for future flood in the area.

Commissioner Hillier said he believes the city may already be liable and the resolution would only set responsibility for maintenance of various flood protection devices in the Rock Canyon area.

Hillier indicated that the proposal has been turned back to the city attorney for further exploration.

"We must find out if this does in fact give us total responsibility," he said. "If it does, it will have to be worked out so the responsibility lies where it belongs."

The city's responsibility does lie in the coordination of programs to overcome the problem, he added.

Hillier has been working closely with Col. John Montrose, Provo parkway authority, Walter Draper, who is working with the county flood plan, and Marvin Wiggins, neighborhood chairman for the Rock Canyon neighborhood.

"We are cooperating and working together for a solution to the problem," said Wiggins.

He feels that some progress has been made in averting what he calls "severe flood danger" in the Rock Canyon area.

Provo street crews began Tuesday to remove silt, gravel and other material from the debris basin immediately north of the LDS Temple to increase flood protection, Hillier said. Several planners have expressed concern that the 15-acre-foot capacity debris basin will not provide significant flood protection.

The suggestion has been for the basin to be increased to about three times its present capacity.

The debris basin is designed to catch sudden storm runoffs so water can be drained into the present drain system.

City Engineer Jack Zirbes said a 48-inch pipe would be run to Provo and the basin increased to 75 or 80 acre-foot capacity.

Delays came in the street crew work because permission from property owners had to be gained and equipment set up.

The Forest Service had asked the City to obtain a permit for the gravel removal project, but the permit is conditioned on the signing of the joint resolution. The Commission deferred action on making official application for this permit.

Hillier indicated that subdivision and zoning ordinances for flood plane zones are being enforced.

U Vending Service expands over 15 years

RY McDOWELL
Staff Writer

Years ago, BYU consisted of two plays working out Chevy and using surplus, cookies, cakes. Vending a total of 32 part-time jobs, 360 vending and five full-time up with the BYU's huge demand for it can be eaten on.

Swan, vending of Food Services, in a good day 12 to of apples will pass the 360 machines campus and into the angry students.

noted that last year when it takes a person's money and then refuse to deliver the goods. The guilty party is the person who tries to get something out of the machines by using either Canadian coins, slugs, finger nail files, pocket sticks or other foreign materials.

The Canadian coins and slugs, caught by a magnet in the machine's coin slot, and the other objects broke the coin slot so that those using the machine later lose their money.

He noted that even though students who went home to Canada for Christmas have been back for over two months vending still has about two machines a day put out of order by the Canadian coins.

"The largest majority of trouble we have with the machines is caused by foreign materials put into the coin slots," he said.

"They're pretty fool proof," Swan said speaking of how difficult it is to get something for free out of the machine. He explained that three or four students every semester think they can out smart a machine and end up getting their hand caught in it. He added that those guilty students find this a very painful experience with some almost having their hand broken.

Swan mentioned several other types of thieves who try and take advantage of the unguarded machines. These are the local hoods who use crow bars or other tools plus the somewhat professional thieves who use stolen or duplicate keys or other devices to break into a machine's money bank, he said.

"We occasionally set alarms on our vending machines," he said telling of an incident where some machines down at the Fieldhouse had been repeatedly broken into. Working with Security and using an alarm, the offender—a local high school student—was caught.

Swan also told of a somewhat professional group which passed through the area last year who broke into the machines by ripping off the locks with a special device. He explained that after this experience stronger locks were put on the machines.

The final difficulty Swan singled out was the rapidly increasing prices of products sold in the vending machines.

Bruce Bybee, sophomore from Grand View, Idaho, reaches for an ice cream bar from the ELWC vending machine, one of 360 vending machines on campus.

Going to court? Security continues to investigate thefts

pick time slot

Beginning Monday, students going to Traffic Court may sign up for a specific hearing time for their case, according to Jim Terry, Traffic Court chief justice.

Students who want their parking tickets appealed will be able to sign up on a sheet posted outside the court, said Terry. They will be able to sign up for any time between 4:10-5:30 p.m. for Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday, or between 10-11 a.m. Thursday.

With two suspects apprehended, BYU Security is continuing its investigation into the theft of wallets and money from locker rooms in the Smith Fieldhouse and the Richards Building, said Chief Robert Kelshaw.

Friday night, Security officers caught a 17-year-old youth taking a wallet from an unlocked locker in the Smith Fieldhouse. The youth, who also possessed a small quantity of marijuana at the time, admitted to the theft of 11 other wallets in the two physical education buildings, said Asst. Chief J. Wesley Sherwood. The youth will be tried before the juvenile court, he said.

Early this week a BYU student turned himself in to Security, said Sherwood. He admitted to having devised a schedule of theft from lockers in the buildings, Sherwood said.

The student stole a total of $2,400 during a 40-week period, said Sherwood. "Three days a week the student would go through lockers until, for the day, he had collected $20 from wallets and pockets," Sherwood explained.

From the reports of the two suspects, Chief Kelshaw believes many thefts of wallets and money are not being reported to Security.

"The youth apprehended in the Fieldhouse admitted to stealing 11 wallets. There were only four or five of these thefts reported to our office," said Chief Kelshaw.

Chief Kelshaw said the reports of thefts to date indicate thieves are hitting both the women's and men's lockers and, in addition, are stealing from coats and purses of students while they are in dance classes in the Wilkinson Center.

He said the time for court appeals had not been changed, but the new policy would make the system more efficient.

The policy change was made by the Traffic Court Thursday and was approved by BYU Security. The change was a suggestion of Rick White, Traffic Court adviser.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE STUDENTBODY

Many students feel that student government is powerless to do anything significant on campus. Because of this attitude they pay little attention to it. To help you know how I feel, please consider the following.

What is the destiny of BYU? John Taylor prophesied that we will "lead the world in everything pertaining to learning of every kind."

How do we stand now? We are respected, but we are not looked up to as an overall leader among the great universities. Some graduate schools are reluctant to accept BYU graduates. We have not established an academic tradition and reputation equal to that of Harvard, Yale, or Princeton.

What prevents us from being leaders? It is simply our own attitudes. Our leadership position among universities will only be secured when students and teachers concentrate on being excellent in all we do. Proper attitudes must burn in the hearts of every single teacher and student.

Can student government do anything to help mold those proper attitudes?

YES! Student government can:

1. Enrich the academic atmosphere by broadening our scope of experience through lectures, departmental presentations, etc.
2. Increase awareness through more effective publicity.
3. Call everyone's attention to the nitty-gritty, often-gripped-about but seldom-solved problems of the classroom such as teachers who fail to prepare; students that fail to prepare; the continual search for the short-cut; the attitude that one must choose between activity in the church and academic excellence; work loads that correspond miserably to credit allotments; and the quest for grades rather than for understanding.
4. Continually remind the university community of its loftiest goal: to bring glory to God by producing competent people in every walk of life.

When student government does these things attitudes will change. Please read my specific platform in the ELWC Cafeteria window and also in a separately published diar. If you believe in the principles I have outlined, please vote for me in the election for Academics Vice President.

Thank you -- Lynn McMurray

Meeting scheduled for tonight to discuss proposed bus lines

By CINDY DOMMER
Universe Staff Writer

A policy meeting regarding several proposed Utah County bus lines will be open to the public today at 7:30 p.m. in the Provo City hall to discuss financing Phase Two of the study, according to Robert Kunz, director of the project.

The proposed bus lines have been developed by the Utah Valley Area Transportation Study during Phase Two of the study, said Kunz.

The purpose of the study is to plan more effective and efficient transportation in this area, according to Kunz.

Phase One recommended additional mass transit facilities in the Utah Valley area. Also recommended were a study of equipment and service level needs and a possible capital improvement plan.

The proposed route include two in Provo with three alternatives and two in Orem. Also proposed is a bus line from Payson to Salt Lake City, he said.

The cost for the transit system changes and improvements will be split among Utah County cities, Utah County, and BYU. BYU offered to help finance the operations, said Kunz, "because they are one of the major destinations," and many of the students and faculty would use systems.

The proposed bus routes would go through the areas of highest student density such as 900 East, 700 East, 500 North, on-campus housing, and the northwest area of Provo, said Kunz.

Phase Two will be completed by July 1, 1974, according to Kunz.

Road repair funds wait organizations' approval

Federal money was allocated Tuesday at a meeting in Salt Lake for the rebuilding of the intersection of 1230 North 500 West in Provo, if approved by several groups in the area.

Money for the Orem Street project, however, was not awarded because of delays in the approval of the project.

Delays in federal government approval of an Action Plan will hold up approval, according to Russell O. Brown, Orem City's consulting engineer. The project probably will be programmed for funding during fiscal year 1974-75.

The cost estimate for improving 1230 North-500 West intersection is $220,000. Federal money will provide $170,000. Because 500 West is a state road the remainder of the funds will come from the state.

In order for the rebuilding to go ahead approval must first come from local policy making groups and regional government organizations.

In the Provo area these organizations are the Utah Valley Area Transportation Study (UVATS) Policy Committee, made up of elected officials from throughout the county, and the Mountainland Association of Governments, composed of officials from Utah, Wasatch and Summit Counties. Approval must also be given by the State Road Commission. Officials indicated there should be no delay in the approval.

Other projects receiving approval were 1300 South in Salt Lake City and 20th Street in Ogden. Total federal funding for these projects will amount to $3,930,000.

Dorm food centers lack variety, students claim in Universe poll

By GARRY McDOWELL
Universe Staff Writer

Lack of variety is a common complaint students have about the food they're served at the Morris and Cannon Centers, according to a recent Universe sampling of student opinion.

Twenty students who live in on-campus housing were asked two questions: What is your biggest complaint about the food served at the Morris or Cannon Centers? Do you think the number of student complaints about the food is justified?

Lack of variety headed the list of complaints, which also included such things as the food is not cooked right or it's greasy.

But many of the students surveyed felt that there is an unjustifiably large number of complaints being made about the food.

Even though Food Services gets a lot of complaints from these students, most of these students interviewed said there's just much joking about the food as there is real complaining.

Steve Suhr, a freshman in physics from North Ogden, said he didn't have any complaints about the food. However, he added, "Most people joke about it—even I do."

"People have a right to complain, but many of the complaints I hear is just because there's nothing better to do," commented Lorie Lloyd, a freshman in fine arts from Los Angeles. She said that students jokingly call the Morris Center the "Mordid Center."

Dennis Hill, a sophomore in business education from Salt Lake City, said, "The Food Services has to feed so many people, they can't please everyone."

Bob Noschiss, a sophomore from Clifton, Ariz., said, "It seems strange to me they'll bless their food and thank Heavenly Father for it and then cut it down right after."

Tim Behrent, a junior majoring in Greek and Latin from Cleveland, Ohio, said,

"It's just human nature to complain. Deep down inside most of the kids really aren't complaining."

Many students pointed to a monotonous menu as their biggest complaint.

"You know what day of the week it is by what you're eating," said Tracy Evans, a freshman in drama from San Bernardino, Calif.

Mike Harward, a freshman in humanities from Blackfoot, Idaho, said, "I eat later and get stuck with what's left over. Once I ate spaghetti three times in one week."

Rich Andrus, a business management major from Orinda, Calif., said, "They don't make it so obvious" speaking of the lack of variety.

"They give their hamburger patties four different names."

Many of the students had comments about chicken fried steak.

"One night they'll give us chicken fried steak, and the next night they'll serve it with tomato sauce and call it swiss steak, and then the next night they serve it breaded and call it still another name," said Cor Mack, a freshman from Phoenix, Ariz. majoring in sociology.

John Haynes, a sophomore in youth leadership from Lancaster, N.H., said, "It seems like we eat chicken fried steak every day and cube steak every other day."

Several students commented about the parsley served with Food Services with many of its dishes.

"Parsley is like an institution in and of itself. We don't eat it, we just play with it," said Debbi States, a freshman from Folsom, Ill. majoring in broadcasting.

Gas saving measures work at Y

BYU conservation measures seem to be working well in saving gasoline, according to Bill Graham, supervisor of the Motor Pool for the Physical Plant Department and Wendy Jarvis, foreman of the Grounds Section of the Physical Plant Department.

BYU has not been hurt by gasoline cut backs to this point, Graham explained that decreases in speed and measures such as not idling equipment in cold weather have definitely increased gas mileage.

Consolidation of pick up and delivery trips to Salt Lake City have also helped conserve fuel, according to both Jarvis and Graham.

New vehicles which are being purchased to replace worn vehicles are of smaller types, said Jarvis. The new smaller vehicles are also helping in fuel conservation.

Wherever possible, travel is being consolidated, Jarvis explained. Both Graham and Jarvis were complimentary about people obeying speed limits and trying to conserve.

Fuel is not the only saving, however, Graham said that wear and parts replacements are also down. He said that high speed driving is hard on everything from front ends and tires to brakes.

Application made for land study funds

Application for a grant from the Four Corners Regional Commission to make a $40,000 planning and engineering study of the land between Provo and Springville is now underway by the two cities.

The study will examine the potential for major industrial development of the Ironton area.

Provo Commissioner M. Wayne Hillier, who announced the grant application at the Monday commission meeting said that both Provo and Springville are interested in development of the entire Ironton area which stretches between the cities.

City planner Jerry Howell of Provo, said that the application may not be approved this year but added,

"We want to get on the list in the hope that in the new fiscal year, which starts in July, we will have a good chance of being funded."

About 650,000 students 18 and over are eligible for monthly Social Security payments because a parent receives disability or retirement benefits or has died, according to the Social Security Office.

Students can continue to get payments to age 22, or slightly beyond for undergraduates, as long as they remain full-time students and unmarried.

However, if the student's status changes while he is receiving payments, he should notify the Social Security Office immediately.

Social Security payments to students can also be affected by total yearly earnings over $2,400 from part-time or temporary jobs. If his earnings are more, he should report it, otherwise he may get benefits which will have to be returned.

For further information contact the local Social Security Office at 173 E. 100 North, Provo.

ant mothers can be a painless ch, according to rters of the Lamaze method. ole idea behind the method, says Kathleen ocal CWP (childbirth n) instructor, is not with contractions but ntrate on different ethods. irth without pain is a t not a promise to Mrs. Peterson.

Peterson explained she had her second and third children using the methods she had learned through the Lamaze program. "There was a big difference in the labor room when I had my second and third children. I couldn't believe it," she said. "I felt absolutely no pain with my second child."

"My baby was so healthy that my doctor was so excited he started recommending the Lamaze method to other expectant mothers," Mrs. Peterson continued.

Shirley Young, a mother having experienced the Lamaze method, said "at first when I was reading about the method I was kind of skeptical, but I am so glad I gave it a chance. I know it is effective and I am so thankful for it."

Dr. Fred Kartchner, a specialist in gynecology, feels any method of preparation for labor experience is helpful. "There is no question about the approach being good," he said, "but it depends upon the patient's ability to make it work."

However, he stated, one problem with the Lamaze method is that teachers of the technique who are not properly prepared, or who do not have proper training, sometimes mislead the patients.

Another drawback, according to Mrs. Peterson, is some people associate hyperventilation with the Lamaze method. Hyperventilation is a condition caused by an oxygen and carbon dioxide imbalance due to rapid breathing. She claims it does not occur if the breathing is done properly. "Students are taught how to recognize the onset of symptoms of hyperventilation and what to do if they should start to hyperventilate," she explained.

BYU, UCLA debaters clash

A lively and entertaining debate occurred Tuesday in the Varsity Theater as BYU debaters proposed their solution to the energy crisis amidst opposition and humor from UCLA's No. 1 debate team.

In the no-decision debate, BYU debators Rique Ochao and Mac Haddow matched words and wits with Royal Oaks and Frank Kimball before an audience of about 100 people.

"It was a pretty good debate," said Jed Richardson, BYU's debate coach. The audience also announced its approval with frequent peals of laughter.

The UCLA team had used several articles out of the Universe to support their contentions. Haddow said Kimball of UCLA had "pointed out he had read it which has increased the Daily Universe readership 200 per cent."

Mrs. Peterson said the problem arises when women read some books on the method and attempt to use it. "They go into labor not fully understanding the theory of what they are trying to do or how to use the techniques properly," she said.

Technically the Lamaze method is called psychoprophylaxis. Women who have used the method have adopted the name "childbirth without pain." CWP originated from an extension of Pavlov's findings on conditioned reflexes. In 1951, Dr. Fernand Lamaze, a French obstetrician, visited Russia and saw numerous unanesthetized women giving birth. These women showed no evidence of pain and were able to cooperate fully and effectively with their doctors.

Dr. Lamaze adopted and improved the method and with his associate, Dr. Pierre Velley, began preparing their patients for a new type of birth: active, participating childbirth with a minimum of discomfort and a maximum safety. Majorie Karmel introduced CWP to the United States through her book, "Thank you, Dr. Lamaze."

Interested women can get further information on the method and the classes from their doctors, said Mrs. Peterson.

Foreign consuls to get film honors at banquet

Awards for the three winning film documentaries will be received by the consuls of three different countries during a banquet scheduled for Friday between 2 and 4 p.m. in 357 ELWC.

The three winning documentaries were presented and judged by Professor Charles L. Metten of the dramatic arts department and Tom Bay and Roger Sorensen, both graduate students of the same department. The winning documentaries were chosen from films submitted by 59 countries.

Receiving the Cougar Award for the best documentary film will be the consul of the Netherlands for "Adventures in Perception."

The Consul of West Germany will receive the Cougar Critics Award for the entry, "In the Heart of Europe," and Consul Edward Botha of South Africa will receive the Cinematographers Award for "Radio Bantu."

Among other dignitaries who will be attending the awards banquet is Mayor Russell D. Grange of Provo.

Latin Americans schedule activities

An election, a dance, a fireside and a Spanish-speaking symposium have been planned by the Latin American Students Association (LASA) according to David Martinez, president of the association.

Next year's candidates for office for LASA will be introduced during a free dance scheduled in 179 JSB, on Friday at 8 p.m. The dance is open to the student body. Elections will take place on March 14 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in 370 ELWC. Martinez said that the elections are open to anyone wishing to vote.

Monica Dausett of Argentina and Miguel Quintero of Mexico are two students running for the office of president.

A fireside has been set for Sunday, March 17. John Maestas, director of the Lamanite program, will speak on "The Lamanite Today at BYU."

Polynesian students, members of the Tribe of Many Feathers and all Latin American students are encouraged to attend the fireside at 8 p.m. in 167 MCKB.

"We want to get all the Lamanite students together at the fireside," said Martinez.

LASA students will co-host the Spanish-speaking symposium with the department of Latin American Studies. Noted scholars on the problems and accomplishments of Spanish-Americans will be featured during the symposium.

Utah Gov. Calvin Rampton will also take part during the symposium which has been scheduled for March 21 and 22.

Ballet Folklorico will be performing at the Smith Fieldhouse on March 21 at 7 o.m. as part of the symposium.

Necessary signatures received

Almost all the necessary 1,250 signatures on petitions in favor of changing the ASBYU Constitution have been obtained, said ASBYU President Mark Reynolds.

Reynolds said Wednesday he hadn't gotten any of the petitions back yet, but is assuming they have either gotten enough signatures or are very close.

Reynolds said he was not "seely in a hurry to get them turned in fast" because he felt there was enough time left to get any signatures still needed. He said those circulating the petitions were not being pushed to get them in.

Until then, said Reynolds, he will "accept the reports that we are either there or real close." He continued that "as far as we're concerned, the pressure is off on collecting the signatures."

Kirk Reuter, one of the authors of the new constitution said he had three people circulating petitions that had not turned them in to him.

He estimated that there were about 200 signatures on the petitions that he would be able to give to Reynolds.

Bicentennial observance

Spanish Fork to be key area

By BONT OVERN
Universe Staff Writer

Spanish Fork activities will be a focal point of celebrations in Utah as it joins in the nation's Bicentennial observance in 1976.

According to J. Austin Cope Jr., postmaster for Spanish Fork, the first white men to enter the Utah Valley were two Spanish priests, Fathers Escalante and Dominguez, who entered from Spanish Fork Canyon on Sept. 23, 1776.

"We want to make the commemoration of this event the focal point of our planning because it is the only thing in Utah that is truly bicentennial," explained Cope. "We plan to re-enact the padres' expedition, having a celebration in each town where they stopped, culminating in Spanish Fork, where a statue of the two padres will be unveiled," he continued.

Statue by Fairbanks
"The statue is being designed by world-renowned sculptor Dr. Avarad T. Fairbanks, who recently completed the statue of Moroni for the Washington, D.C. temple," Cope said. "The statue will be eight feet high in bronze, on a four-foot pedestal, and will be placed in the city park."

"It is a rather unique situation, we feel," Cope said. "A 98 per cent Mormon community is erecting a monument to two Catholic priests. But we feel that it is important and we have received a letter with the blessing of the First Presidency and Quorum of the Twelve concerning the endeavor."

Medal proposed

"We also have proposed a commemorative stamp, coin and medal that would circulate on a national basis," Cope said. These would be stamped in bronze or silver and would also honor Escalante and Dominguez.

According to Dr. Fairbanks, the early pioneers were very patriotic. Many of them were descendants of men who served in the Revolutionary War. "It was the Mormon people who first raised the American flag in Utah and Mormon men, serving in the Mormon Battalion, were instrumental in gaining the southwestern territory for the United States. Thus, it was the pioneers who brought the spirit of liberty to Utah and many of Utah's Bicentennial plans honor them."

Guidelines established

The American Revolution Bicentennial Commission (ARBC) has established guidelines whereby each state in the nation can apply for grants of up to $40,000. State projects can qualify for ARBC grants if they fit into one or more of the Bicentennial themes: Heritage '76, Horizons '76, and Festival USA. In addition, projects must be operational during or before 1976.

The state of Utah is planning many Bicentennial projects, according to Elizabeth "Teddy" Griffith, director of special projects for the Utah ARBC.

A trail guide following the Escalante Trail will be published by the summer. The trail, which will also be the site for the re-enactment of the 1776 expedition, starts in Santa Fe, N.M. and continues on through Colorado, Utah, Mexico, and back to Santa Fe. Following the national theme of Heritage '76, the Utah State Board of Education is producing a film on Father Escalante. BYU is also planning a documentary film as a contribution to the celebration.

First chapel preserved

The first Mormon meetinghouse to be called a "chapel" by the pioneers has been disassembled and carefully preserved. The Bicentennial committee is looking for a site to restore the building, which was also the first Mormon chapel to have a steeple.

Dance Hall Cave, once used by the pioneers for dances, is another state project for Heritage '76, said Mrs. Griffith. The cave is located in lower American Fork Canyon, near the trail to Timpanogos Cave. Plans are being made to build a hiking trail with explanatory markings, clean the cave, and build a footbridge over the American Fork River.

The University of Utah's contribution to the Bicentennial will be a published history of ethnic groups in Utah. The history will deal with immigrants to Utah from the British Isles, Northern Europe, the Mediterranean, and such persons as the Jews, Pacific Islanders, Spanish-speaking peoples, American Indians, and the blacks in Utah.

Cities plan projects

Many other cities throughout the state have projects planned. A Springville women's club plans to landscape a "mini-park" in the city that can be used as a rest stop or a picnic area.

The city of Escalante plans to create a five-acre Pioneer Memorial Park adjoining its racetrack. The park is to have a picnic area, tennis courts, and a dancing area.

Ogden is planning a Golden Spike Museum to be built in the Union Pacific railway depot. The museum is to feature the guns of Jonathan Browning.

A Southern Utah Special Events Center is being planned for Cedar City. This will be used for conventions and cultural events.

Under the Bicentennial theme of Festival USA, Utah has plans for an all-Indian fair dedicated to the purpose of promoting cultural understanding between Indians and non-Indians. Visitors will be reminded of the Indian's contributions as they join in dancing and craft events at the fair. This will also give the Indians a chance to learn some of their own history. The fair is to be held in a canyon area near Salt Lake, according to Mrs. Griffith.

Musical composition proposed

The Utah ARBC has also commissioned the writing of a major musical composition and other works to be performed throughout Utah by the Utah Symphony and Ballet West for the Bicentennial celebration. They also hope to sponsor an "original children's play related to American ideals."

A Utah Center for the Arts is in the Salt Lake City Bicentennial plans. This center for the extension of the visual and the performing arts would be located north of the Salt Palace, Mrs. Griffith explained. In commemoration of the nation's 200th year, Utah is planning a community progress program. The state will give cash awards in seven areas to cities in Utah. Awards will be given for most overall progress, human relations and cultural enrichment, economic development and several other areas. The cash awards received by the cities are to be put into some community service project. This is to be an ongoing program, with awards every two years.

Restoration of Devereaux House
Utah's first and most elegant mansion, according to Mrs. Griffith, is the Devereaux House in Salt Lake City on South Temple Street. A bill has been introduced into congress whereby each state can apply for up to $1 million to restore a historic building. If the bill passes, Utah's candidate for the funds will be the Devereaux mansion.

Every state in the union will erect an obelisk monument in Valley Forge, Pa. Utah will have her own landscaped area and will erect a seven foot monument with the names of the men in Utah who have been awarded the Utah Medal of Honor for their military service to the nation.

National plans for America's Bicentennial observance are getting bigger and better all the time, according to the national ARBC.

Official symbol selected.

The official Bicentennial symbol has been selected and a set of guidelines for the symbol's usage has been published by the ARBC. The standards seek to assure the integrity of the symbol's design in all media. The symbol may not be used to promote commercial products.

Unauthorized use of the symbol is a violation of a Federal statute and is punishable by law.

Another national program in conjunction with the Bicentennial involves "Sister Cities." This program is already functioning under the U.S. Town Affiliation Association, a non-profit organization responsible for coordinating relationships between some 420 U.S. cities and over 500 "Sister Cities" in other countries.

Seminar on jobs offered

In an effort to acquaint graduating seniors and their wives with the problems of adjusting to a new job environment, the College of Business has invited a number of executives and their wives to participate in a two-part seminar.

The first part of the seminar for women only will be held on March 7 at 7 p.m. in A150 JKBA. The second part will be held March 14 at 7 p.m. in room A150 JKBA for both wives and husbands. All graduating seniors and their wives, as well as other interested persons, are invited.

During the "women only" session on Thursday, wives will be able to "learn from the experiences of business executives' wives how they cope with the numerous problems of urban living and family versus corporate stress," said Joyce M. Thomas, director of administrative services in the College of Business.

The three speakers of the first seminar will be Mrs. Wendell J. Ashton, whose husband is managing director of External Communications for the LDS Church; Mrs. W. Boyd Christensen, whose husband is vice chairman of the board of Allstate Insurance Co.; and Mrs. Gerald Davey, wife of the president of Mediate Computer Services.

There will also be small group sessions with other National Advisory Council women participating who will discuss not only attitudes toward moving and adjusting to a new community, but also the responsibilities of the husband and wife to each other to ensure a good partnership.

The first of these seminars was presented last year at the College of Business because increasingly aware that many U.S. companies were no longer recruiting on the BYU campus. These companies felt too many students quit jobs because the students or their wives could not adjust to their outside job environment.

Wayne Hansen, director of personnel at the Placement Center, said this problem was lessening because of these seminars and the growth in worldwide recognition of the church. Hansen also suggested for each couple to realize what a great missionary opportunity is theirs.

The theme for the second seminar for husbands and wives on March 14 will be "Communicate: Face the Challenges of the Business World Together."

ISSUE: I took my car to a local car dealer to have a regular three-month check which consists of checking minor things and changing the oil. I gave the mechanic specific instructions to perform only the normal three-month check, and I told him not to change the oil filter. When I went to get my car, he had changed the oil filter and also serviced the emissions system without any authorization from me. He charged me for the labor because he said the owner's manual says the filter should be changed every three months. The owner's manual says the filter should be changed every six months. I really feel that I have been taken.

ANSWER: When our office first contacted the service manager at this particular dealership, he offered to refund the money for the work done replacing the oil filter, but he said there is a law requiring work to be done on the emission system each time the car is serviced. We informed him that there is no such law. He refunded the money for the emission system work when he could not come up with a copy of the law.

ISSUE: I have a charge account at a local department store. I lost my card and someone found it and charged some merchandise on it. Now the store won't let me use my account. What can I do about it?

ANSWER: When we contacted the department store they said the person who was using the card illegally had been apprehended. The person said he would pay for the things he had charged. The account was reopened.

Noah, played by Walter Rudolph, entreats his wife, played by Kathleen Watt, to board the ark in the opera production, "Noyes Fludde," scheduled nightly through Saturday in the Provo Tabernacle.

Musical depicts Noah

By PATTI HARRINGTON
Universe Staff Writer

Benjamin Britten's "Noyes Fludde," the musical story of Noah and the ark, directed by BYU's Clayne W. Robinson, might be better described as an elaborate roadshow.

The lighthearted production, playing in the Provo Tabernacle through Saturday night, features Noah, trimmed in white fabric fringe, his family, the ark and, of course, all the animals.

School children perform. With the animals species played by dozens of local elementary school children, it is obvious that everyone, including those on stage are there to have a good time during the performance.

Ingenious animal costumes add to the fun of the show, and an amused audience watched the entrance of the pairs from every imaginable corner of the building. While the young performers often lack the control and volume to effectively sing their parts, they tried hard to make up for it with a valiant effort to work together.

The orchestra too is not without special effects. Before the show begins, Mr. Lawrence Sardon, symphony orchestra director, leads the audience in three hymns which they later sing in harmony with the performers.

The voice qualities and facial expressions of the performers are good, particularly those of Noah, played by Walter Rudolph, his wife, Kathleen Watt and a daughter played by Kathy Kockerman. However, the special effects carry the show.

raven sent from the ark, delighting the audience as she walks on the pews of the Tabernacle as a bird would walk on skyscrapers ledges.

The audience participation is itself a special effect, singing along with the cast, sounding somewhat like a heavenly choir. Using wooden flutes, cast recorders, the orchestra is able to imitate bird chirps and other sounds of nature. As God speaks throughout the play, the orchestra's percussion section vibrates in rhythmic sounds to provide heavenly emphasis.

The orchestra also uses a string quartet to accompany the soloists as well as a piano to provide modern dance background music.

Rendering an especially imaginative performance are opera members portraying the rising storm and flood. Beginning with the first tinkles of the piano signifying the initial raindrops, a rising crescendo of sound and action, climaxes in a vivid portrayal of crashing waves, frightened animals and gusting winds. As the storm subsides and the water leaves the land, cast members rise in a triumphant finale alleluia introducing the symbolic appearance of the rainbow.

The Tabernacle is an excellent facility for this production. The ark's mast, which is extended high above the physical platform supports a huge sail. The finale of the show surrounds the chorus's hallelujahs and the coming up of an even more impressive rainbow which spans almost the entire platform.

The production had its religious moments, especially with the stately entrance of Noah's family at the beginning of the performance.

With excellent special effects and children galore, "Noyes's Fludde" provides a fun look at Noah's predicament in a short, but worthwhile production.

Mormon arts festival celebration begins soon

BYU's Sixth Annual Mormon Festival of Arts starts next Thursday and runs until March 30, according to Dr. Lael J. Woodbury, dean of the College of Fine Arts and Communications.

The Festival, sponsored by the college, is a celebration of and a showcase for the creativity of Latter-day Saint artists," Dr. Woodbury said.

One of the main purposes of the Festival is to create a feeling of community among LDS artists. He said that the Festival attests that many LDS people are creating artistically and the general quality of expression is improving.

It is designed to express the values that are prized by the members of the Church, of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints," Dr. Woodbury continued.

The 30 events scheduled for the 2 1/2-week festival will include the areas of art, drama, music, literature and political science. In past years, the Festival has placed emphasis on a particular theme, encouraging works of art submitted to be based on it. Scott M. Boyler, assistant to Dr. Woodbury, said, "This year the theme is open and works of art in all categories will be presented."

Some of the outstanding events in this year's Festival include, "The Restoration," a new oratorio based on scripture and composed by Dr. Merrill Bradshaw, composer in residence at the University. It will be performed by the BYU Oratorio Choir and the Philharmonic Orchestra, assisted by the A Cappella Choir and the University Chorale.

KBYU-FM will broadcast three special programs dealing with Mormons and their art. These special features will be on Eliza R. Snow, Marvin Payne, and the Mormon Tabernacle Choir.

"Enemy of the People," directed by Dr. Charles Metten and filmed by KBYU-TV in coordination with the Departments of Dramatic Arts and Communications, will be aired for the first time during the Festival. Two original plays, "Saturday's Warrior" and "Gideon," will also be presented on stage during the Festival period.

Motion Picture director and winner of television's Emmy Award, Tad Danielewski, will discuss "The Arts as Communication Media." The Department of Communications will sponsor a panel of media and government experts discussing the topic "Government and the Press: A Case of Credibility."

French history film tonight on KBYU

"The Rise of Louis XIV.," director Roberto Rossellini's biographical film about one of Europe's most powerful monarchs, will be presented on "Humanities Film Forum" tonight at 9 p.m. on Channel 11.

Rossellini's film comprises 21 years of history from the death of Mazarin in 1661 to the installation of Louis at the new court of Versailles in 1682.

Discussion hosted by the "Humanities Film Forum" host, Dr. James H. Billington for a discussion of the film are: William H. McNell, professor of history at the University of Chicago; Georges May, professor of French literature at Yale College; and Orest Ranum, chairman of the history department at Johns Hopkins University. "Humanities Film Forum" is a production of KCET-Los Angeles, made possible by a grant from the National Endowment of the Humanities.

US health project serves 1,000

1,000 patients are being served each month by the Rural Health Project, a project of the LDS according to Richard McDermott, director of the project.

The project now has two offices in Castle Dale and one in Fillmore, Utah. McDermott, administrator of Utah LDS Hospital in Provo, said the project is based on the needs of the rural areas.

The project was set up two years ago to study the needs of the rural areas and to develop a program to meet the needs of the rural areas, said McDermott.

The project consists of a committee of representatives from the areas of the state to study the needs of the rural areas and to develop a program to meet the needs of the rural areas, said McDermott.

The project stems from the fact that many areas in Utah do not have adequate resources for health care. In Salt Lake City there are 600 physicians, but in the Provo area there are only 130 doctors on the staff, said McDermott.

This map, published by the Rocky Mountain Medical Journal, shows how many physicians are located in different areas throughout the state.

The project received about $340,000 from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation in the form of a grant, said McDermott.

McDermott said, "We think there are enough resources in the state of Utah to solve the problem. We should tie in the equipment and personnel in the north with advanced communication and transportation programs."

He said, "The area is here to provide a service and students can request certain games to be installed." However, he also said the games of chance such as the marble games will not be put in.

According to Bown, the student reaction to the games has been very good. He said that there is usually a line for the games every evening and, because the games only take a few minutes, it is a good way to pass the time while waiting for the show.

The games are not owned by the Wilkinson Center but are donated, because parts are hard to obtain and expensive.

Japanese bypass test to be given ROTC offers new program

By DAVID S. LUMAN
Universe Staff Writer

The Japanese bypass examination will be given March 27 from 4-7 p.m. and March 30 from 9-12 p.m. in 234 MARR.

Students who plan on taking the exam must be presently enrolled in Japanese 201 or Japanese 301, according to Richard Eubank, instructor of Japanese.

A special exam form should be picked up from the department secretary and must be signed by Dr. Gubler, chairman of the Asian and Slavic Language Department," said Eubank.

Students may not enter the examination room without the department chairman signature, he said.

A $10 fee is required along with the form being validated by the Cashier's Office in the Administration Building," he added.

The exam is objective-type, said Eubank. "The grade is determined by averaging your grade on the examination and your grade in the class."

Students seeking further information should contact the secretary in room 250 FELB.

textbooks, laboratory fees and other educational expenses; and the opportunity to compete for free civilian flight instruction at more than 200 of the colleges and universities offering the ROTC program, said Capt. Miles. Those accepted enroll in private flying schools, with all expenses paid by the ROTC.

But even more important, according to Capt. Miles, the financial benefits is the leadership training the program offers. It is the only course on any college campus where the training may be obtained.

Capt. Miles said, "The program offers college students the challenge of leading and motivating their peers. It develops their self-understanding and tests them physically and mentally."

Sophomores are eligible to apply for the ROTC's two-year program. To apply, students should contact Capt. Bernard Miles in the ROTC building, ext. 3601.

new railroad line study being made

Economic feasibility study looking into the possibility of a train route over tracks that would run through Provo within a month, according to a spokesman from the U.S. Department of Transportation.

The study is studying the possibility of new lines that would route from Los Angeles to Ogden making stops in Salt Lake City and Provo. The study has not been set as a stopping point.

The announcement of the study was made last Wednesday by the vice president of marketing, Harold Graham, at a meeting with Moss and other representatives.

He was encouraged by the meeting," said Moss. "Mr. Graham said the track between Ogden and Los Angeles is in very good condition and he agreed that it would be a good idea to use it for summer visitors, but also during the winter of the ski trade."

The route would branch off another route beginning in Provo. At Rock Springs, Wyoming, the Los Angeles route would proceed to Ogden while the other would continue to Provo, via Idaho and Oregon.

The proposal is being pushed by officials from Ogden and Provo. Sen. Moss, Rep. Wayne Owens and a representative of the Utah State Office of Economic Development are supporting the proposal from congressional delegations of Idaho, Oregon and Utah.

He said the biggest problem facing Amtrak is a lack of equipment. He indicated that there might be a possibility of end service between Los Angeles and Ogden using the line that is available then during a layover of the regular limited service between New Orleans and Los Angeles.

He said it would be possible to make two runs during the day as long as the equipment could be returned to Los Angeles by the weekend New Orleans service. He said there are two possibilities in setting up service. The first would be to use the existing Amtrak equipment. The second is an arrangement whereby local governments pay two thirds of any losses incurred by Amtrak.

ELWC gets new games BYU professor selected to serve Gov. Rampton

The games area of the Wilkinson Center has recently installed seven new electronic games, according to Bown Shafter, games manager.

The games, which cost 25 cents to operate have been installed a few at a time since last October. The most recent addition is the "Got-tha" and, according to Shafter, there is a possibility of getting more games, including hockey.

He said, "The area is here to provide a service and students can request certain games to be installed." However, he also said the games of chance such as the marble games will not be put in.

According to Bown, the student reaction to the games has been very good. He said that there is usually a line for the games every evening and, because the games only take a few minutes, it is a good way to pass the time while waiting for the show.

A BYU professor has been selected by Gov. Calvin Rampton to serve as a member of a committee to set up goals and standards for Utah police departments.

Charles Fletcher, assistant professor of law enforcement, is currently working on the Police Task Force of the Committee on Criminal Justice Standards.

The committee is composed of professionals in the field of criminal justice. Fletcher is the only committee member in the academic field.

The task force is designed to deal specifically with police departments to "set up standards and goals for the consideration of police throughout the state to adapt," according to Fletcher.

He explained that recent action in the committee meeting concerned upgrading the police function through the state, and noted that public relations was an important consideration. "The public is in effect the employers of the police," he said.

When the work of the committee is completed the committee will be dissolved, he pointed out.

Fletcher has been coordinator of the Law Enforcement Department at BYU since 1967, previous to which he served in the FBI for 27 years.

Tax help offered

The voluntary tax assistance program sponsored jointly by the Internal Revenue Service and BYU's Beta Alpha Psi fraternity continues today and every Monday, Thursday and Friday through March 18.

The service is offered to help low-income people in filling out their income tax returns, according to Ric O'Neil, head of the tax committee.

People interested in the help should bring their W-2 forms, receipts and records to the Elizabeth Dining Room, 1111 SFLC from 2 to 6 p.m. on the designated days.

Pixie weeks

Y branches have secret pals

By BONI OVERN

Who is that sneaking up to your front door with a goldfish and a candy bar sign? It must be your BYU pixie! BYU seems to be unique in its abundance of these pixies who can be seen running around doing pixie things during pixie week in their branches.

ZCMI FAMILY CONCERT EVENT produced by Northwest Releasing

Most branches on campus have a pixie week at one time or another. "We have a pixie week twice a year in our branch so we can get to know each other," says Megan Smith, a senior in therapeutic recreation from Walnut Creek, Calif. "Girls are assigned guys to pixie and the guys are assigned girls. All week the pixies do nice things for their secret person. Then, at the end of a week, we have a party at MIA where we find out who pixied whom," she explained.

"We have a pixie week in order to build love and unity among the members and to give everyone the opportunity to perform Christ-like service," says Roger Bradford, a senior in journalism from Sacramento, Calif.

Goldfish, flowers, notes with thoughts and quotes, candy bars and cookies are some of the traditional gifts of the pixies. However, some of the more creative pixies have done some unusual things. One girl decorated a whole tree in the Elms Apartments quad for her guy, using crepe paper, balloons, and packages. One guy woke up and found a huge sign in front of his door reading "Hi Howard! Have a great day. I love you. Your Pixie."

"The guys are either super-good pixies all week, or else they leave it till the end of the week and then do something drastic," said Miss Smith. "One of my pixies sent me a dozen red roses at the end of the week one time."

Food seems to be a popular pixie gift. Banana splits and pizzas have been delivered to front doors, and one girl got a different fruit every day of the week and on the last day received a fruit basket.

Another individual woke up to find a complete breakfast on his doorstep, including orange juice, bacon, eggs, and toast, each in a big baggie and fixed to look like a giant worm.

One thoughtful pixie took the label off a can and delivered it to his secret person.

One girl in the dorms didn't know it, but her pixie was also her best friend. She kept getting cookies from her that she didn't like so she gave them to her best friend, not realizing that she was the one who made them.

Tutors give extra help

While tutoring is meant for students, Jerry Jensen, program director of the Tutoring Service, said, it will not best serve them if used as a crutch.

Speaking on the objectives of having Tutoring Service in the campus, Jensen said its primary aim has been to provide extra help to those students who have made diligent efforts with their studies, exhausted any available resources but failed to improve upon some aspect of their course work.

Tutoring Service is sponsored by the College of General Studies and according to Jensen, the service is necessary and can become a great asset when students request it as the last resort.

City's planning aid cut

Provo's federal assistance for city planning allotment has been cut by 41.85 per cent from last year's funds.

According to David Gunn, assistant community development director, many projects beneficial to Provo which were funded by the 701 Urban Planning Program will either be curtailed or will have to be funded by the city.

The program is administered through HUD. Last year, Gunn said, the program allowed the Provo Community Development Department 66 per cent of the total funds used under the 701 program. The city contributed the other third needed.

He explained the Congress appropriated $75 million this year compared to $110 million last year. The cut in funds was done on a proportional basis.

Last year Provo's share amounted to $47,000. This year Gunn said the city has been given $27,146.

Gunn said Congress cut back funds in anticipation of a new grant which would be allowed under the Better Communities Act and other legislation. But he said it is not funded yet and

"it looks very uncertain now." Under this program the city would be given a block grant according to its individual needs.

"We still hope to maintain viable 701 program," said. "There are some though, we wanted to won't be able to do now."

Dear Studentbody:

During the last few weeks we have strived to liven up this year's student elections. Our approach to this year's campaigning has raised more controversy than we expected. Many people don't know if we are serious or not, so with this letter we would like to clear up the confusion. We honestly feel that we are better qualified than the rest of the presidential candidates, considering our sincere desire to lead this school with excellence and enthusiasm.
